Film, Theatre, and Communication Arts Collection Development Policy

Purpose

The collection supports present and anticipated teaching and research in the fields of Film, Theatre, Communication Arts, and their subdisciplines. At present the central focus of the department and the chief interests of the faculty are encompassed in the following areas of teaching and research: film history and theory, film production, theatre history, theatre production, creative writing. An emphasis on special effects and motion capture technology has emerged in support of new programs developed through the Robert E. Nims Center for Entertainment Arts and Multi-Media Technology.

The department offers the following degrees in Drama and Communications: BA and MFA.

The Bachelor of Arts is offered to students in three options – film arts, theatre arts, and general communication arts.

At the graduate level, the department offers the Master of Fine Arts in Film Arts-Production, Theatre Arts-Performance or Design, and Communication Arts-Creative Writing. Areas of specialization in film arts and theatre arts include filmmaking, acting, directing, and design; and in creative writing include fiction writing, nonfiction writing, playwriting, poetry writing, and screenwriting.

The department also participates in the MA in Arts Administration, which prepares students for administrative careers in all types of arts organizations including museums, galleries, performing arts organizations, festivals and community arts centers.

In addition to the support for the specific degree programs of the FTCA department the collection, especially in view of its broad interdisciplinary nature, also serves as a resource for undergraduate and graduate students and faculty members in other disciplines, notably English, Foreign Languages, Anthropology, Fine Arts, History, Sociology, Psychology, and Political Science.

Treatment of Subject

Practice and methods of, equipment used in, and teaching of the various creative areas taught by the department are collected. Textbooks at the elementary level are not usually acquired for the practical aspects of these creative areas, but textbooks at the advanced level are acquired on a selective basis.
Material collected in theater and film-making include history of, political aspects, teaching of, religious aspects of, role of government in, biographical treatment, legal aspects, social aspects, and psychological aspects.

Materials collected for Arts Administration courses taught in the FTCA Department include the economic, business, legal, and governmental aspects of the entertainment industry.

Types of material

Monographs, DVDS, and serial publications form the basis for FTCA acquisitions. Unpublished screenplays are collected on a selective basis. Reference materials, including bibliographies, dictionaries, handbooks, and encyclopedias are occasionally acquired. Databases that index the relevant serial publications are acquired, as are digital collections of content relevant to film and theatre studies.

Much of the electronic content (books, journals, and databases) that supports the FTCA Department is not purchased directly through the departmental allocation but is acquired instead as aggregated content, often in the form of full-text, interdisciplinary databases or electronic journal packages. Many of these resources are purchased through a separate interdisciplinary allocation or statewide consortial buying arrangements.

Date of Publication

Current and retrospective materials are collected. Current materials are most important. Retrospective materials may be selectively acquired and may be purchased in microform, reprint, or digital formats.

Other Resources

Within the library the listening room houses recordings, videos, and electronic media of plays, musicals and sound effects useful to the department.
